Is Protested by Press Club

The Overseas Press Club of America protested to the Soviet Union yesterday against the expulsion last week of Raymond H. Anderson, one of two correspondents in the Moscow bureau of The New York Times.

The Soviet Government canceled Mr. Anderson's re-entry visa while he was abroad on vacation. No reason was given for the expulsion, but a Foreign Ministry official referred to "passing a letter abroad that was received from unauthorized persons."

On Aug. 29, The Times published a letter by Mrs. Natalya Gorbanevskaya, a poet, recalling a demonstration in Red Square against the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia.

The press club's protest said, in part:

"We urge that you rescind the prohibition on Mr. Anderson's return to Moscow, and that you take steps to insure face-to-face hearings between the press department and any foreign correspondent against whom objections may be raised in the future."
